ABSTRACT

India and China are now may be at logger heads, but centuries back, both the countries had maintained close links in the cultural educational economic fields. While assessing these connections, once has to keep in mind the fact that whereas India was divided and fragmented into various kingdoms during ancient days, China was a unified country with a strong monarchical system at the helm. Various sources clearly prove that India and China have had age old connections. The epic Mahabharath mentions about the heritage and culture of China.
