Abstract:
It is no longer news that every day breaks with the news of terrorist attacks in Nigeria. Though religious violence pre-dates the colonial era, it has now taken various dimensions and scope, thereby threatening the cooperate existence of Nigeria. In our current sickly political system, as this work observes, the known religious violence has evolved into religious terrorism. The Federal Government of Nigeria has used both military and dialogue approaches to solve the problem but to no avail. It is the belief of this work that since all other approaches used to resolve this nightmare have failed, epistemic moral foundationalism remains the most authentic philosophical solution to religious terrorism in Nigeria.
